DAYTON, Ohio, February 28, 1969 --- College women today have a duty to be aware of their feminine role in the everyday businesslike world. This duty consists not only of their career but also the retention of their femininity despite the tempo of our environment. For this reason the PanHellenic Council of the University of Dayton is sponsoring Women's Day, March 8, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. for UD women.

The theme of the day will be "You've Come A Long Way Lady," and will begin with Mass at 11 a.m. Saturday morning. Following will be a luncheon at which the main speaker, Miss Gladys Anderson, assistant professor of Education at UD, will talk on the psychology of women. After this discussion groups will be held on various topics such as retailing, wig styling and makeup techniques. The finale will be a fashion show contrasting 18th century fashion with today's styles.

Included in this show will be the modeling of various gowns that are duplicates of the original gowns of the "Ladies of the White House" now on exhibit in Washington's Smithsonian Institute. These gowns were recently given to the University of Dayton through Miss Pauline Metzger, a member of UD's Home Economics Department. The first dress in the Wittenberg collection was created by Miss Metzger during her senior year at Wittenberg, and she was a member of their faculty from 1953 to 1958.
